

WiredNewYork.com User Remembrance

If there is such thing as being lucky or "blessed," I felt so tonight. I have a loving family, with parents who are unflinchingly devoted to their family and to each other, a big sister I can confide in and who sees me as an equal, grandparents who adore me and cousins, aunts and uncles who have forgiven me time and again for my idiocy in years past. Feuds have occasionally threatened to sever such bonds and divide us, but have never succeeded. I have friends who understand me and have put up with my occasional foolishness, and I might very well have found my better half in recent months. And I'm in relatively good health, in possession of a strong mind, and intend to keep both that way. I don't mean this in some sort of self-exalting way, and I still have a feeling like I don't truly deserve it all, but it's there. And regardless, my gratitude for the way my life has turned out is there, too.

-TLOZ Link5, 5/23/2005

J.B. Hehman • 5/28/1985 - 4/4/2006

AUTO HITS MAN AS HE FLEES THUGS

A 20-year-old junior in the NYU metropolitan studies program died three days after a group of muggers chased him into the path of a car on 125th St. at Park Ave and left him in a coma.

We, the WiredNewYork online community, are working with the New York Restoration Project to identify opportunities to enhance NYC Community Gardens in memory of J.B. Hehman. The first location is in the 500 Block Association of 149th Street West, (Maggie's Garden map @ right). Your donations can help purchase a bench in JB's honor and/or plant a tree in his memory.

A lot is possible in JB's name with substantial donations.

Please Contribute Today

All donations are tax-deductible.

Visit the link below and follow these basic instructions:

<https://www.nyrp.org/joingive.php?action=donate>

- 1) Select Make a donation. Select your donation amount.
- 2) Contributions over $75, entitle you to a gift (tote bag).
- 3) Continue and enter your personal information.
- 4) After entering your credit card info, (or if mailing check or faxing credit card info), enter in the "COMMENTS" area: Restricted to JB Hehman Project
- 5) Confirm to authorize payment.
- 6) Help keep our tally up to date, send an email to: HehmanMemorialFund@hotmail.com so that we can track the total of all contributions. All personal information will be kept confidential.

